To investigate the relationship between colorectal carcinogenesis and mismatch repair gene (MMR) mutation. Sixty-eight colorectal cancer tissues obtained from patients were studied by polymerase chain reaction-single strand conformation polymorphism (PCR-SSCP) analysis, T-C cloning, and DNA sequencing, and the mismatched base pairs and types of genetic mutations were analyzed. One case had a frame shift mutation of MSH2, and one case had a frameshift mutation of MSH2 and MSH3. For tumors with microsatellite instability (MSI), the number of the mismatch base pairs exceeded the normal value, and the number of insertion and deletion mismatch base pairs increased, which was significantly higher than the adjacent normal mucosa (PThe battle for the automotive industry is on, and the world's most powerful economies are gearing up for what promises to be a grueling war of attrition. For the longest time, the United States led the world in terms of numbers of vehicle sales, vehicle production, and reallocation of assets to the luxury market, at the expense of lower- and middle-income consumers. But a few years ago, China became the world's largest market for auto sales, with its economy becoming more and more reliant on non-oil sectors and its consumers eager to replace their aging vehicles. The United States and its neighbors, Canada, Mexico, and Japan, all have developed manufacturing operations in China, which is more efficient than producing 3da54e8ca3
