Cantonese Opera / Ching-fa Gan English Translations Chinese Translation Kong-fa Gan Xiang-fa Gan Cantonese Opera / Ching-fa Gan Ching-fa Gan is a series of operas written by Xian Xinghai(1885-1941) and performed by the Kuan Ming Opera Troupe. The first three operas were performed during a moon festival in 1913; this version of Ching-fa Gan, the first opera performed, was the result of the endeavor of Xian himself in further developing and improving the visual aspects of the arts in China. Ching-fa Gan was remade on January 23rd, 1936, in Hong Kong, by the Kuan Ming Opera Troupe. Xian Xinghai, the first theater writer of modern Chinese drama, was also a poet and a scholar of Chinese theater. He was born in Liaoning province in the year 1885. He had won the contest of the "New Literature Supplement" with the first play written by him, "Shanghai-lu", in 1908. He also won the "New Literature Supplement" in 1913, 1921, and 1927. Ching-fa Gan series are a great contribution to modern Chinese drama. Xian Xinghai began to study Chinese theater and literature seriously during a period that was critical in the whole history of Chinese literature and drama. During the May Fourth Movement, he worked hard to attempt to make the theater expression a popular art. His works are based on the popular beliefs and the working scenes at that time. He reflected the whole progress of Chinese popular culture and the different influences of the empire and foreign countries in the drama. With the liberation of China from the Japanese colonial rule, he became a representative of the modern and progressive drama in China. With the new theater era, Ching-fa Gan became more than just a mere performance piece. It became a great source of inspiration for both the theater critics and the audience. The Chinese opera Ching-fa Gan is a great masterpiece of the popular culture and the cultural revolution. It has a rich religious, philosophical, and social background. It is one of the greatest achievements in the work of modern Chinese drama and one of the earliest attempts to develop the musical expression of Chinese traditional civilization and Chinese popular culture. ‘We commend the government for taking the important step of confirming that it will not support Huawei this time round, and the public’s confidence in the use of Huawei handsets will only grow once this decision is published. We know the security services’ assessment, and we need to know this assessment is based on reliable evidence to enable us to make informed decisions when it comes to the security of our 5G networks. In particular, we need to know the extent to which we can trust the expertise of the UK’s secret services when it comes to enabling the UK to become a 5G hub.’ The government confirmed Huawei will not be excluded from 5G contracts in the UK. Labour is now demanding a public inquiry into the matter, which the opposition party is calling a ‘national security risk’. Jeremy Corbyn said: ‘The UK government has chosen not to exclude Huawei from 5G, but Britain is now reliant on just one company for the key software that powers our 5G networks – and the company’s track record is appalling. ‘The European Union has excluded Huawei from the 5G market for exactly this reason, and, globally, the US government has warned that the company poses a security risk. That government advice has been backed up by the Pentagon’s Homeland Security Department and the Department of Commerce’s Bureau of Industry and Security.’ ‘In the face of demands for an inquiry, the government has been forced to the admission that it has no evidence of any security issues with Huawei – and that the US government is sending its secret service to spy on Huawei’s own staff.’ In the wake of a brutal military defeat and the largest transfer of wealth in history, the question must be asked: how did the cronies and rent-seekers who run our government spend $7 trillion and create 21 million new jobs, all the while delivering the largest tax break and wage boost in generations to the super-rich and greedy few? “I’m sure that while the Treasury and the White House were working on this deal, they thought it over, and considered the practicalities. The Republicans – who appear to make the key choices – decided that the tax increases would not deter them. Neither would the modest income and capital gains taxes on the rich. Nor would the jobs and investment that a bigger budget would permit. So the Obamas and the Bushes,
