“Knives Out” and “The Last Detail” star Chris Evans is on a shortlist of potential new hosts of “Saturday Night Live.” “The Hollywood Reporter,” which first reported the news, said Evans is one of six men being considered for the host job. Bill Hader, Seth Meyers, Kenan Thompson and the “SNL” band One Direction are in the running as well, according to the publication. Hader and Meyers have already been cast as hosts for the 45th anniversary season of the show, which returns to NBC this weekend for its latest episode. SNL has yet to officially announce its 42nd season, which launches Jan. 17. The report did not say if any of those on the list could be officially named as hosts. Hosts of the show have included Will Ferrell, Tina Fey, Dan Aykroyd, Chris Farley, Norm Macdonald and Jimmy Fallon. A purified polypeptide from the middle ear mucosa with weak protease activity suppresses Helicobacter pylori vacuolating cytotoxin-induced vacuolization in the rabbit gastric mucosa. Helicobacter pylori was shown to induce gastric mucosal lesion in rabbits. This lesion was associated with vacuolating cytotoxin (VacA) released from the bacterium. We have investigated a protective factor in a human middle ear mucosal extract against H. pylori VacA. The activity was tested in vitro for the protease (VacA) activity of the middle ear mucosa extract (ME). The protease activity was analysed by measuring the N-benzoyl-Phe-Ser-Pro-Tyr-Leu-Arg-Gly-Lys-NH₂ cleavage. To test the ability of the protease activity to suppress the VacA-induced vacuolization in the rabbit gastric mucosa, the extract was treated with an immobilized polyclonal antibody to the protease activity and the antibody to VacA. The results showed that the extract exhibited weak protease activity and that the protease activity suppressed VacA-induced vacuol
