It is intended for running tests on the Sun's JVM, or on the test server hosts that are provided by GeoTools and that the GeoTools developers access through their workstations. Note that many of these options are not compatible with the GeoTools project "release mode". This is a testing environment, with functionality that is not covered in the official, production quality release mode. The Geotools build configuration is specified in the workspace. This configuration contains the user.dir property, which is set in the $JAVA HOME/bin directory. For example, on a MacOSX platform the user.dir property could be set to

$JAVA_HOME/Library/Java/JavaVirtualMachines/1.6.0_21.jdk/Contents/Home. The user.dir is used to help determine the location of extra software and files that are used for testing. 0cc13bf012

I'm using SubSonic and dll that subsonic generates to build asp.net mvc web project. I'm using this simple test application that subsonic generated I want to remove this line from the code (i can't find any way to delete that line) builder.RegisterRoutes(routeTable); I'm looking for a way to remove that code, in my real project i'm using database to store routes. A: Unfortunately, you can't remove it with code. The call to RegisterRoutes is part of the constructor of the DefaultControllerFactory. If you don't call it, it's NULL and we don't even instantiate a DefaultControllerFactory. While the code is in there for other things, it isn't created until we instantiate a DefaultControllerFactory, so we don't see it then. The only thing we can do is work around it by calling InitializeSubSonic in the AppStart folder, before calling SubSonic. I've sent a PR to SubSonic to remove the RegisterRoutes call in the constructor. Until then, I think you have to call it. public void start() { mSyncVars.get().service.post(); reset(); play(); } public void reset()
